The École des Arts Décoratifs Paris collaborates with a network of prestigious European and international institutions (universities and schools) on all continents.

In terms of education, it is continuing to establish new key partnerships that aim to offer students a choice of projects in line with current social and artistic issues:

- a double master's degree with Bunka Gakuen University in Tokyo;
- a partnership with the Euro-Mediterranean University of Fez;
- a reinforced teaching partnership with Pratt Institute based on collaborative workshops.

These initiatives aim to enrich the quality of teaching and expand the opportunities for students to acquire training, knowledge and culture.

A diverse group of French and international students is currently studying at École des Arts Décoratifs Paris. The 5-year programme leads to a Master's level degree. The school research centre, EnsadLab, has 8 research groups working in various art and design fields. It runs interdisciplinary research projects with public and private partners.

The École des Arts Décoratifs Paris is a higher education public institution under the authority of the French Ministry of Culture and a partner of the Université PSL.
